

Support The Cause

New Build Locomotive Scotland was borne out of a simple realisation; that out of all new builds currently being undertaken within the preservation scene, none of them represent the majesty that was Scottish built steam locomotives.

We aim to fill this gap in the preservation world by building a new locomotive in Scotland, by Scotland and for Scotland. The project is to be a new build of one of the currently non-existent Ben Class locomotives, namely Ben Alder (Dubs & Co. 3685 built 1898).

Earmarked for preservation from 1953, only to meet the cutters torch in 1967 after being "hidden" in numerous locations, this forlorn story is known to many. With no Ben Class locomotives in preservation there is a fine opportunity to right a wrong and provide the preservation scene with a uniquely special locomotive.
